

Frank Fuller

Sensei Fuller started Korean Karate in the mid-1980s. He founded a self-defense system that is called Hoshin Kwon Bup. He has trained in various Japanese and Korean systems over my time in the arts and also hold instructor ranking in several systems. He has had further training in Chinese and Southeast Asian systems. He competed periodically in forms and sparring competitions in his younger days and has taught classes and developed black belts at various locations, primarily at university recreation centers and martial arts schools.

I have also been elected to several halls of fame in recent years for my contributions in the arts.
